Stewart Sukuma is a Mozambican musician, composer, writer, actor and musical director, widely recognised as one of the most internationally active Mozambican artists of his generation having performed in numerous countries across Africa, Europe and the Middle East. His multidisciplinary career is situated at the intersection of music, cinema, literature and critical reflection, distinguished by conceptual depth, and strong social awareness. His approach to film music is structural and conceptual: sound is treated as a space of memory, an internal rhythm of the narrative, and an emotional extension of the image.
